Environment Department seeks new Director of Communications

SANTA FE – The New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) is seeking to immediately fill the Director of Communications position. This is a governor appointed position reporting directly to the Cabinet Secretary and serves as integral part of the NMED senior leadership team.

Prospective candidates should possess exceptional oral and written communication skills and have experience in communicating effectively with a wide variety of stakeholders through various mediums (i.e., print, social/digital media, radio/television, etc.). The ideal candidate is someone who can lead both people and projects in a fast-paced setting while meeting tight deadlines with exceptional attention to detail.

The salary for this position is between $80,000 and $90,000 annually, depending on experience. For more information or to apply for this position, visit the Governor's Office website, here.
